St Patrick's College, Silverstream Foundation Newsletter

Kia ora koutou Greetings everyone

Welcome to the last Foundation newsletter for 2018.

It is hard to believe that the year has gone so quick and I have completed one year as the Rector of the College. It has been a successful year for Stream in 2018 and I thank all the Community.

One of the highlights of the year was hosting the 1988 1st XV in a reunion early in the year. From this Old Boy Nick Piper has created a film called 'The Stream' which is about the 1st XV of 2018 and its success but more importantly, it represents the values of what Stream stands for. The programme screens on Sky Sport 1 on the 10, 11, 12 December.

To all our Foundation supporters of 2018 a big thank you for your support. Once again thanks to Mike O'Leary for his continued work in the Old Boys Network and Foundation.

I am confident for the continued successful future at Stream and I have been honoured to lead Stream in 2018.

I wish you all a very safe happy and holy Christmas and all the best for 2019.

Ka kite anō (see you again)

Wearing a colostomy bag is no picnic - this man made it less of a big deal

Whanganui's John O'Neill was a quiet, unassuming, thorough and dedicated man who put service before self, Barry Maughan says.

"He was a stickler for doing things correctly."

John's wife adds he was a kind and loving gentleman, a family man who had a strong faith.

John died on September 17, aged 91. He had lived with an ileostomy since 1966, had a long voluntary involvement with ostomy groups and was treasurer for the Whanganui one until his death

He was awarded a Queen's Service Medal in 1991, for his services to Wanganui County Council and to ostomy groups nationwide. His ostomy work became worldwide, and he was especially keen to get support for people in Third World countries who have ostomies.

An ostomy causes a change in the way urine or stool exits the body as a result of a surgical procedure. Bodily waste is rerouted from its usual path because of malfunctioning parts of the urinary or digestive system. An ostomy can be temporary or permanent.

John was born in Whanganui on November 22, 1926, the eldest of three boys.

He spent his first five years on the family's Makuku Farm on Field's Track, then moved into Whanganui to live with relatives. He went to the Villa Maria and Marist Brothers schools, then spent three years at St Patrick's College in Silverstream.

After school he went to work for stock and station agent Wright Stephenson, while studying accountancy at night school.

He qualified as an accountant in 1948, and in 1953 became the accountant at a new Wright Stephenson branch in Whangārei. In 1956, when his father needed him, John returned to the family farm

In 1965 he became ill with ulcerative colitis and in 1966 had the ileostomy operation, which diverted waste from his small intestine into an external pouch. The operation cured the disease and also introduced him to a nurse, Jan Patterson.

The two married in 1970 and had two daughters, Caroline and Teresa. Meanwhile, John had also been voted on to Wanganui County Council. He was there 18 years, and was deputy chairman when he retired in 1986. His doctor, Leo McCarthy, urged John to start a Whanganui group for people with ostomies. He did, in 1975, and was its first president.

It began years of involvement with ostomy groups, first nationwide then worldwide. He was the president of the New Zealand Federation of Ostomies from 1982-84, its treasurer for 12 years and its patron for four years. In 1985 he represented the South Pacific region at an international conference, and he was treasurer for the International Ostomy Association from 1991 to 2004.

During that time he went to conferences all over the world. He took the whole family to one in Paris in 1988, and at another in Puerto Rico in 2007 he received the Archie Vinitsky Award for services to ostomy.

He had helped set up new ostomy groups in Asia and the Pacific. He was the honorary auditor for 12 Whanganui organisations, receiving grateful gifts of whisky and book vouchers.

At 89 he could no longer drive, and he stopped going to the farm. He died at Kowhainui Rest Home

Chris Alosio (2009-13) to star in Australian TV mini series “Fighting Season”

Leading men: Fighting Season also stars Jay Ryan (left), the actor best known for his role as Jack Scully on Neighbours

In character: The Foxtel drama marks Chris' first foray into television

Attending an all-boys private school in New Zealand, Marco Alosio was groomed for a life on the rugby pitch.

So it was no surprise that the 23-year-old kept his acting dreams a closely-held secret.

While most of his peers aspired to represent the All Blacks, Marco longed for a career on the screen - something he has now achieved with a starring role in the big-budget mini-series, Fighting Season.

Speaking with The Daily Telegraph on Tuesday, Marco revealed he never articulated his acting dreams while a student at the elite St. Patrick's College in Silverstream.

'It's not normal where I come from,' the star explained to the publication.

'There were only seven guys in drama class across the whole school and none of us admitted it outside the room.' Standing at a strapping 185 cm, Marco would have been perfect for the All Blacks, but instead decided to follow his heart into acting.

And the risk has paid off, with the star landing a role in Fighting Season, which premieres on Foxtel's Showcase channel on October 28.

The drama revolves around Australian soldiers who return from Afghanistan and struggle with the emotional challenges of adjusting to life back home.

The series also stars Jay Ryan, the actor best known for his role as Jack Scully on Neighbours.

'It's pretty surreal. It's still sinking in for me,' an ecstatic Marco admitted to The Daily Telegraph.

While this is Marco's first foray into television, the up-and-coming star has a number of stage credits under his belt.

He recently played Ferdinand in an adaptation of William Shakespeare's The Tempest, and has also appeared in a rendition of the iconic New Zealand play Foreskins Lament.

Streamer: Johann Go (2011-13) wins world's most prestigious University Scholarship for 2019

New Zealand's Rhodes Scholars represent the best and the brightest of this country's young people," said the Governor-General Her Excellency The Rt Hon Dame Patsy Reddy when announcing the awards. She noted the Selection Panel faced a tough decision in choosing the three scholars from New Zealand.

"I was impressed once again by the intelligence and poise of this year's candidates during the interview process and their obvious enthusiasm for their areas of study. I wish the recipients all the best for their studies at Oxford." Johann Go completed cojoint Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Health Sciences degrees at the University of Auckland. He is currently the Provost's Scholar (Visiting Student), Worcester College, Oxford, studying Philosophy and Political Theory.

Johann attended St Patrick's College, Silverstream, before starting a Health Sciences degree at the University of Auckland. "Soon, I discovered my passion lay in the philosophical and socio-political aspects behind the great issues of the day, particularly in social justice and health," he says.

Achieving 15 First in Course Awards during his time at Auckland was not his only achievement. Johann volunteered over 16,000 hours across 10 years with St John Ambulance, founding and working with the Silverstream Elderly Outreach Group and Academic Tutoring Programme, and receiving several prestigious community service awards for his volunteer work, including the Minister of Health runner-up Youth Volunteer of the Year Award, the St John Grand Prior's Award, and a Mayoral Commendation Award.

Johann says his overarching motivation in life is to advance the human condition socially, politically and ethically. "To do this, I am a firm believer in combining the principles of analytic philosophy and political theory with basic human compassion."

He plans to study for a Master of Philosophy in Political Theory at Oxford's Department of Politics and International Relations, a programme that combines philosophy with politics and political theory. "This especially appeals to me, as I am passionate about using theory to inform practice and making political philosophy relevant to the wider populace."

He is passionate about increasing diversity in the humanities and at Worcester College has already been the student body's Equal Opportunities Representative and LGBT+ Officer, helped with access schemes around Worcester, been a volunteer tutor with Schools Plus, an outreach organisation for disadvantaged communities, and continued his work with St John Ambulance.

To further his desire to make philosophy and political theory more accessible and useful, Johann writes for mainstream media on a wide range of subjects, "always keeping in mind that philosophy and political theory should be interesting, relevant to our world's great challenges, and accessible and useful for everyone."

"I hope to one day contribute something significant to how we do political philosophy and orient it towards advancing our great challenges; not just for 'us' or 'ourselves', but for everyone."
